Hongkong, September 14th, 1895.

THE fact that China's indomnity loan has boon given to Russia instead of being negotiated through Sir Robert Habr tends to direct attention to the position occupied by the Inspector-General at Peking No men has ever served his employers better than Sir Robert Hart has served the Poking Government. Possessed of indefitigable industry and a spendid talent for organisation he has brought the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs Service to a pitch of perfection that excites universal admiration. The Chinese are believed to have appreciated his services; at al events they have allowed him to carry on his work with very little interference on thair part. When the country became liable for the payment of a large war, indemnity, therefore, it was expected that the Government would turn, as they had in former cases of inancial and political trouble, to the Inspector-General. It was understood that S.r. ROBERT HART was willing to undertake the work of financing the loan on certain conditions which would have materially swelled the Imperial revenue and contributed to the prosperity of the country. The matter was looked upon as being as good as settled when suddenly it was unnounced that Russia had offered her services as financier, -and after a little dallying those services were accepted, thus giving Russia and her friend the capitalist, la belle France, a financial grip on China's throat and therefore on the service of which Sir ROBERT HART is the head.

The circumstance is calculated to, suggest some doubt as to whether Sir RODERT HART's influence at Peking has not been somewhat overrated; and also some question as to the tendency of that influence, which, whether it has been in some degree overrated or not, has been and is very great: It has been the fashion to regard Sir ROBERT HART as an apostle of civilization in China, using his influence for the gradual exening up of the country; and therefore for slthough that appears not to have been the the banefit of foreign tradal relations. The British Government has attached much value to his advice and he has been almost more powerful than the Minister. That his advice has always been honestly given goes without saying, but we have high cuthority for the saying that no man can serve two musters! When a litigant desires a lyice he is not likely to go to his opponent officiney br counsel. Sir Robert HART's su vices have been given fully and completely to China and his influence, while consolidating the great service over which he so ably presides, has been, in the opinion of some judges, rather calculated to keep fireigners in general at arm's length. In a question vitally affecting Hongkong which is not unlikely to engage attention at an early date, namely, the acquisition by Great Britain from China of a farther strip of territory on the Kowloon side, Sir ROBERT HART'S voice is likely to carry some weight. The proposed acquisition would include all the Customs stations at the entrance to the harbour and the Inspector-General would be able to supply the Chinese Government with arguments which might not becur to themselves against the proposal, Something would of course have to be substituted for the present arrangement, for the British Government and public opinion at home would not sanction the colony's being again turned into a smugging station. It is premature to discuss that point at present, but it will be seen that Sir Robert HART will have something to say in the matter, and with every respect for his great abilities and high character it will be well to recognise that he is a counsellor engaged on the other side," that is, the Chinese side.

With reference to the reported rejection by a committee of plans prepared by the Director of Public Works for the proposed b . There are two lots in front of the City Hall available as sites. After the matter had been dragging on for some time being delayed by the plagne of last year and afterwards by the engagements of the Director of Public Works in connection with the Taipingshan arbitration, the committee got fairly o work some months ago, and in order to see whether one or both lots would be required requested the Director of Public Works to have plans prepared for the inclusion of the Supreme Court, Post Office, and other Government offices in one building. . On the plans being submitted it was at once seen that the idea of placing all in one building could not be carried out The present idea therefore is to have the adjoining lot, the Colonial Secretary's members of the committee was from the outset that competitive designs should be invited and intention of the Government, it will probably be carried out. If the jury were satisfied that the plaintiff's statements about her signature were false, that she was saying what, was untrue with a view to misleading the jury and strengthening her case by making them suppose that she could not possibly sign the deed of assignment because she could not write Chinese—if she was deceiving the jury and they were satisfied she could write her name, ther must of necessity be a doubt about the woman's svidence in other particulars. Blie had admitted to the Court that she signed the petition for letters of administration, so that, according to her story, the real plaintiff was taken away during the course of the administration proceedings on one occasion, and on another a second woman was taken. COL. DENBY AND MISSIONS IN

Mr. Denby, the U.S. Minister to China, a dispatch just received at the Department State, in describing the work of Christian missionaries in China, says :--"I think that no one can controvert the patent fact that the Chinese are enormous! benefited by the labours of the missionaries their midst. Foreign hospitals are a great boon to the sick. Ohins, before the adven of the foreigner, did not know what surgery was. There are more than twenty charity hospitals in China-which are presided over by mon of ca great ability as can be found elsewhore in the world. Dr. Kerr's hospital at Canton is one of the greatest institutions of the kind in the world. The Viceroy, Li Hung-chang, has for years maintained at Tientsin at his own expense a foreign hospital. In the matter of education the movement is immense. There are schools and colleges all over China taught by the missionaries. " Protestants and Catholics from nearly ever country under the sun are engaged in this work and, in my opinion, they do nothing but good.

I leave out of this discussion the religious bonefits conferred by converting Chinese persons to Christianity. This, of course, is the one be the revenue from which the account payable supreme object and purpose of the missionaries, to which all olso is subsidiary, but the subject States. There is no established religion in the United States, and the American Buddhist Mahommedan, Jew; infidel, or any other roligionist, would receive at the hands of his country's representatives abroad exactly the same consideration and protection as a Christian would. I can only say that converts to Christionity are numerous. There are supposed to be forty thousand Protestant converts, now in China, and at least five hundred thousand Catholic converts. There are many nativ Christian churches. The converts seem to be as devout as poople of any other race.

" As far as my knowledge extends I can and do say that the missionaries in China are selfsacrificing; that their lives are pure; that they are devoted to their work; that their influence is beneficial to the natives: that the arts and sciences and civilization are greatly spread by their efforts; that many useful Western books are translated by them into Chinese; that they are the leaders in all charitable work. giving largely themselves, and personally disbursing the funds with which they are intrusted; that they do make converts, and such converts are

There are eight principal regions producing distinct types of vegetation, states Mr. 1 Lobert Walker. In the equatorial zone we find the most luxuriant, owing to the combined heat and abundant moisture. Trees are large, flowers display varied and pleasing brilliancy, and aerial plants weave dense networks of vorotation; Palme, bananas, and orchids are on every side. trapping trade. One singular plant of this zone is the rafflesia a fungoid parasite with in diameter. Rivalling this is the gristolochia in some cases large enough to be worn as In this zone also are some of the most sterile tracts, due to dryness—notably the Sahara desert and a portion of Arabia. The tropical zones, again, exhibit palms and bananes, but a evidence, but are fewer, erborescent grasses are heaths flourish. Evergreen slirubs begin are abundant. So vast are the myriads of the visfulo stars shown in thouands to the unaided eye, in term of thousands in a small belescope, in hundred thousands in a moderate telescope and in abounding millions in our mightiest netruments and most consitive photographic plates—that the mind of man fails to realize their number But a much mightier effect would be nocessary if we would sook to form a truly comprehensive estimate of the contents of the universe. We are to reflect that all objects which we can see—that is, a small portion o those which are in an unusual condition constitute in all probability not one thousandth perhaps not one millionth, of the material heavens Ve are to reflect that each one of those suns which we find glowing in the depths of space is only one out of an untold number of other bodies, many of which are as large and many very much larger.

It is possible to measure the light of the stars and planets by photography, but this is a slow rocess, and during the last year an almost astantoneous method of measurement has been developed in Ireland. This consists in the use in place of the eyepicce of a telescope of a very sensitive photo-electric cell, which is connected with a specially constructed electrometer. photo-electric cell, as now employed at Mr. Vilson's observatory at Daramona, consists essentially of a glass cell containing the liquid connected, one side of the cell having an aperture losed by a quartz window, while a class tube having a tightly-fitting aluminum wire passes through the opposite side of the cell nearly to his window. The outer end of the aluminum wire is connected by a platinum wire to one sole of the electrometer, and a platinum wire n the hottom of the cell passes to the other pole. The inner and of the aluminum wire is made sensitive by a coating of selenium. receives a positive electric charge and the liquid a negative one, the difference of potential being indicated by the electrometer. An ordinary paraffin candle at a distance of 9 feet produces an electromotive force of about '03 volt. or 3/100 that of a Daniell cell. The light of Vega-as concontrated in a two-feet reflecting telescopeis slightly greater this, while that of Arcturus or Regulus, 56. Starlight is thus shown to be an easily measurable quantity. The values of tained agree fairly well, for relays of similar colour, with the photometric measures of magni tudes obtained by noting the thicknesses o glass prisms that extinguish the light-hithorto employed by astronomers.

After a spectroscopio comparison with the gas the permanent radiations of the sun's atmosphere that are not recognized on the earth are reduced to a single one. This is a green ray, called the ray of the corona, which is neonling to the highest regions of the solar atmosphere allowing us to suppose that it belongs to a gas ightor than hydrogon.

Experiments with the hydrometer as chemical balance have been made by an English chemist, Mr. H. I. Phillips, and have resulted in a simple instrument that is useful for certain purposes. Gilded brass bulbs are screwed to an aluminum stom floated in water in a class cylinder, and kept upright in the centre of the vessel by two arms moving on perpendionlar guide rous. In weigh ing out a definite quantity, the weight is first placed in the pan. The guide rod needle is then moved opposite the needle of the arms, the weight is removed and the substance to be weighed is gradually dropped into the pan until the stem sinks to the point indicated. The range of weight that can be recorded is limited and, with the dolleroy, depends upon the size of

With which is incorporated

THE CHINA DIRECTORY.

THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL ISSUE, and will be found, as usual, to show an advance on preceding years both in fulness and accuracy of information. The DIRFCTORY covers the whole of the orts and cities of the Far East, from Penang to Vladivostock, in which Europeans reside. Not only is the Directory as full and complete in each case as it can be made, but each Colony, Port, or Settlement is prefaced by a DESCRIP. TION, carefully revised each year, most of which will serve as accurate Guides for the Tourist, giving every detail in connection with the places, their History, Topography, &c., &c. The Information afforded in these Descrip-tions, consisting of over NINETY highly intoresting articles, packed with facts concisely set out, and containing statistics of the TRADE of each Country and Port, would alone suffice to fill an ordinary volume.

The work contains Directories and Descrip-Kewkinng: Tainanfr Hankow Takow Wuchang Swatow anton Ichang Chungking. Whampea Ningpo ' Kowloon Wei Hai Wei Wenchow -Amoy Pakhoi . Nanking Tumsul Lungchow Mongtzu Keelung EASTERN SIBERIA
